COX NOMINATED FOR PRESIDENT ON 44TH BALLOT BY DEMOCRATS

Ohio Governor Wins by Acclamation in San Francisco Convention When Palmer Withdraws From the Race.

PASSED McADOO ON THIRTY-NINTH BALLOT.

Convention Hall, San Francisco, Tuesday, July 6.—Governor James M. Cox of Ohio was nominated for President by the Democratic National Convention at 1:30 a. m.

The nomination came on the forty-fourth ballot. When the night session began, the thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth ballots were taken. Attorney General Palmer then released his delegates. In the succeeding ballots Cox gained steadily, until on the forty-fourth he had secured 699 votes and it was apparent that before the ballot was completed he would obtain more than 720 votes, the two-thirds majority required to nominate.

Vice Chairman Amidon of the Democratic National Convention, manager for McAdoo, interrupted the voting and moved to make the nomination unanimous which was done amid uproarious applause.

It was 1:43 o'clock a. m. when Cox was declared the nominee.

Thereupon the convention adjourned until noon to complete the work by nominating the candidate for vice president.

Cox was nominated by acclamation before the finish of the ballot. He had 699 votes at that time and McAdoo 270 when the motion was made to declare the nomination unanimous.

JAMES M. COX.

COX'S CAREER A RAPID RISE

Began as Farm Boy, Turned to Teaching, Reporting and Publishing.

Like Senator Warren G. Harding, James M. Cox has achieved the eminence of a nomination for chief magistrate of the United States from humble beginnings on an Ohio farm. In common with the Republican nominee, he is a newspaper proprietor, who for many years has made politics his avocation. His home is in Dayton.

Senator Harding represents the state of Ohio in the United States senate, while the nomination for the Presidency has come to his Democratic rival in his third term as governor of the Buckeye state.

Governor Cox was born on March 31, 1870, on a farm near Jacksonburg, Butler county. He is just past the half century mark.

The early years of the Democratic candidate were similar to those of any farm boy. He spent his spare time selling newspapers and working as a printer's devil in a newspaper office. His yearning for an education had to be satisfied so far as regular courses were concerned with several years in the high school at Amanda, Butler county. At first he became a school teacher, studying all the time and constantly fearful, as he has since confessed, that some of his older pupils would stump him on some question.

In the small town of Middletown John Q. Baker, brother-in-law of the candidate, ran a daily newspaper, which was not noted for the sharpness of its news columns. Cox told Baker what he thought the Signal lacked. Baker's reply was: "Join the staff and do the job yourself. I'll give you $10 a week."

The next day he was on the job and began to hustle. So long as Cox remained it was the exception when any item of interest escaped his search.

One day three years later, in 1894, he resigned to become secretary to Representative Paul J. Sorg of the Middletown district. Later he represented this same district himself. In August, 1898, Mr. Cox returned to the newspaper game. Through the financial assistance of good friends he was able to buy the Dayton News, which at that time was on "its last legs."

Inside of ten years after a hard struggle, for his capital was limited, he had paid off his debt and had a paying proposition.

Manages His Papers.

In 1905 Mr. Cox added the Springfield (Ohio) News to his holdings and formed what is known as the News League. On the day of his purchase Mr. Cox changed the name of the paper, its politics and the time of issue. It has been successful financially from the start. In spite of the fact that he has been in Congress and the governor's chair a considerable time, Mr. Cox has always been known as the personal manager of both newspapers. He has also become connected with a number of other business enterprises.

Having reached the point where he thought he could afford to satisfy his longing to go to Congress, Mr. Cox in 1908 accepted the Democratic nomination in the Third district. There was some dissension in the Republican ranks and Cox was elected.

"Women are so shallow" but many a man get beyond his depth chasing them.

It was while serving his second term as a congressman that Mr. Cox was nominated for governor of Ohio. Those who say that Cox has luck point to the defection from the Republican party due to the Progressive movement when Cox ran in 1912. He had been placed in nomination prior to the Republican split in Chicago. A month later Judge E. B. Dillon, Republican nominee for governor of Ohio, withdrew from the ticket. Cox practically had the governorship presented to him that year.

Beaten for Re-election.

Two years later Governor Cox was defeated for re-election by Frank B. Willis. But in 1916 Cox came back again and was returned to the state capital as chief executive of the state. He was chosen for a third term in 1918.

During the first term Governor Cox had to deal with the extraordinary floods. He was a war governor in his second term and has since had reconstruction problems to deal with. In his first term the workmen's compensation law in Ohio was passed, and Governor Cox has always taken credit for its passage.

In 1917 Governor Cox got into a wrangle with H. A. Garfield, the coal administrator, when he seized a lot of coal bound for points in the Northwest and turned to over to relieve an acute shortage in Ohio. Dr. Garfield denounced this as an illegal procedure. The governor replied that he had appealed to the President, and in taking the coal had simply carried out an order which a subordinate of the coal administration in Ohio had refused to obey.

In handling the situation brought about by the many strikes incidental to the post-war period Governor Cox removed the mayor of one Ohio city because, as alleged, he had failed to take proper steps to protect the rights of both sides.

Favors World League.

Governor Cox is an advocate of the League of Nations. In an article published less than six weeks ago he predicted that the Democratic convention would endorse the vital principles of the covenant as brought back by President Wilson.

Governor Cox was married to Mayme L. Harding at Cincinnati on May 23, 1898. Three children—a girl and two boys—were born of this marriage.

In July, 1909, while her husband was serving in Congress, Mrs. Cox filed a suit for divorce in Dayton on the grounds of extreme cruelty. Eight years later Governor Cox married Miss Margaret Blair, daughter of Thomas S. Blair, Jr. of Chicago and New York. The wedding took place on September 15, 1917, at Elmhurst, Ill., the Blair summer home, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden. The governor had met his present wife at Virginia Hot Springs about a year before their engagement. He has built a beautiful country home near Dayton for her. It is known as Trailside.

Governor Cox is a member of the Episcopal Church.

TESTING EGGS FOR HATCHING

Satisfactory Candler May Be Made With Shoe Box Large Enough to Cover Lamp.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An egg, whether impregnated or not, has a small grayish spot on the surface of the yolk known as the germinal spot. As soon as a fertile egg is placed under a hen or in an incubator development begins. All eggs should be tested at least twice during the period of incubation, preferably on the seventh and fourteenth days, and the infertile eggs and dead germs removed. White eggs can be tested on the fourth or fifth day, while the development in eggs having brown shells often can not be seen by the use of an ordinary egg tester until the seventh day. Dead germs soon decay and give off a bad odor if allowed to remain under the hen. Infertile eggs make good feed for young chickens and are often used in the home for culinary purposes. Most incubator companies furnish testing chimneys with their machines, which will fit ordinary lamps. Electric or gas lamps may be used in a box with a hole slightly smaller than an egg cut in the side of the box and at the same level as the light. They may also be tested by sunlight or daylight, using a shutter or curtain with a small hole in it for the light to shine through.

A good homemade egg tester, or candler, can be made with a large shoe box, or any box that is large enough to go over a lamp, by removing the end and cutting a hole a little larger than the size of a quarter in the bottom of the box, so that when it is set over a kerosene lamp the hole in the bottom will be opposite the blaze of the hole the size of a silver dollar should be cut in the top of the box to allow the heat to escape.

The eggs are tested with the large end up, so that the size of the air cell may be seen as well as the condition of the embryo. The testing should take place in a dark room. The infertile egg, when held before the small hole, with the lamp lighted inside the box, will look perfectly clear, the same as a fresh one, while a fertile egg will show a small dark spot, known as the embryo, with a mass of little blood veins extending in all directions. If the embryo is living; if dead, and the egg has been incubated for at least 48 hours, the blood settles away from the embryo toward the edges of the yolk, forming in some cases an irregular circle of blood, known as a blood ring. Eggs vary in this respect, some showing only a streak of blood. All infertile eggs should be removed at the first test. The eggs containing strong living embryos are dark and well filled up on the fourteenth day, and show a clear, sharp, distinct line of demarcation between the air cell and the growing embryo, while dead germs show only partial development, and lack this clear, distinct outline.

FLOORS IN POULTRY HOUSES

Must Be Kept Dry, as Dampness Is Fatal to Both Young and Old Fowls—Also Keep Clean.

Poultry houses may be built with or without floors. In either case they should be dry, as damp floors make damp litters, and dampness is fatal to both fowls and chicks. If the house is on dry, sandy soil, a dirt floor is usually quite satisfactory, but as a rule it is more damp than board or cement floors, according to the United States department of agriculture. Dirt floors should be scraped and new soil put in two or three times a year to keep them sanitary. If board floors are used they should be both tight and smooth so far as to make them dry and easy to clean. If possible they should be eight or ten inches from the ground to allow a circulation of air and to prevent rats from harboring under them.

DUCKLINGS THRIVE ON MASH

Mixture of Cornmeal, Ground Peas, Bran and Middlings Is Fine for Young Fowls.

Growing ducklings thrive best on a feed composed of equal parts by measure of cornmeal, ground peas, bran and middlings, all made into a thick mash either with scalding hot water or milk. The mash is improved by adding short-cut green grass, clover or some other green stuff, and a few handfuls of coarse sand.

STANDARD SIZE FOR FRUIT BOXES

Berry and Grape Baskets Are Now Regulated by State Government

WILL PROSECUTE VIOLATORS

Interesting News Items, Briefly Condensed, Picked Up at the Department, Which Are of Interest to the People of the State.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Because the average person relies almost entirely upon the eye to detect differences in the size of the various packages in which farm products are offered for sale, the practice of using short measure baskets and boxes which look like standard sizes has developed. On practically every market there are many packages, so similar in appearance that it is impossible to tell that they are of different capacities.

In the effort to do away with some of these sizes, shapes and makes of climax baskets for grapes, the Bureau of Markets of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has issued rules and regulations providing for three standard sizes of climax baskets, holding two, four and twelve quarts, respectively. These three sizes will answer all practical needs of the trade and everybody can distinguish the different capacities at a glance.

Likewise, the Bureau of Markets rules and regulations provide four standard sizes of baskets for berries, fruits and vegetables in place of the many baskets with slight variations in capacity which are being used. These four standard baskets hold one-half pint, one pint, one quart and four quarts, respectively. These rules and regulations further provide for two crates of uniform dimensions to hold the standard berry boxes and the four quart baskets. The standard thirty-two quart crate will hold thirty-two quart or sixty pint berry boxes and the six basket crate or carrier, largely used for peaches and tomatoes, holds six quart baskets. All these standard containers must have the capacity in terms of dry measure plainly and conspicuously marked on the outside thereof and all the standard closed containers must have the name and address of the packer.

All violations of these rules and regulations for standard containers should be reported to the Bureau of Standards of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs, Harrisburg, or to the local city and county inspectors of weights and measures.

State Wheat Acreage Shows Drop.

Reports to the State Department of Agriculture show 26,630 acres, or less than 2 per cent of the area seeded to wheat in Pennsylvania last fall has been abandoned. It is estimated that there will be 1,586,140 acres to harvest, although labor will be very short. Reports to the department show idle farms in every county except Northampton, which is being checked up.

To Prevent Spread of Smallpox.

State health officials have been ordered to take means to vaccinate and prevent spread of smallpox in Morrison, McKean county, and Galbreath, laborers having developed the disease. The latter case is in a labor camp and railroad authorities are co-operating with state officials. These are the first cases to be reported in some time as April and May were notable for the small number of cases.

Delay in Military Equipment.

Owing to delays in the shipment of equipment by the War Department, state military authorities declare they are unable to give any idea when the recently mustered-in companies could begin work with rifles. Some of them have partial equipment, but others lack rifles and the men are reported anxious to begin rifle practice.

Want Grade Crossings Eliminated.

Citizens of the borough of Lilly in Cambria county have filed a complaint with the Public Service Commission asking for the elimination of two grade crossings on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the borough.

Ask Help of State Police.

State police have been asked to assist in the search for John Seaman of Torrey, Pa., a growing county, who wandered from his home on June 3, supposed to be suffering from melanolia. Descriptions of Seaman have been sent to all the troops.

Commission Cannot Suspend Rates.

The Public Service Commission has no authority to suspend the proposed increased fares of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, which will be effective on July 1 and will not give a hearing to the United Business Men's Association of the City of Philadelphia, on a request for such action. Under decisions of the Attorney General the Commission cannot suspend rates under the act creating the Commission or any of its supplements.

BREEDING PAYS IN POULTRY

Records of Three Flocks of Leghorns Show Specifically Value of Purebred Males.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the value of purebred males counts as much in poultry raising as in stock raising is shown by the records of three flocks of Leghorns, the data for which have been supplied the United States department of agriculture by the North Carolina experiment station. Flock 1, the egg production of which is included in these records, consisted of common hens; flock 2 was produced by breeding these hens to common males; flock 3 was produced by breeding flock 1 to a rooster from a high-producing hen. The following year the original flock laid 89 eggs a hen; flock 2 laid an average of 88 eggs a hen; and flock 3 laid an average of 136 eggs a hen. This increase of 54 per cent in one year tells very specifically the benefits of using a purebred male. But the percentages alone do not tell the whole story, for a big proportion of the increase came at a season—May and June—when the production of flocks 1 and 2 was relatively low and the prices were good.

POULTRY CULLING PAYS WELL

In One Demonstration in Iowa County 609 Hens Out of Flock of 1,548 Were Discarded.

In poultry culling demonstrations held on the farms of the farm bureau members in Emmet county, Iowa, records kept for eleven flocks showed 221 hens were culled out of a total of 1,548 in the flocks, according to the United States department of agriculture. The average number of eggs laid a day by the entire flocks before culling was 40.5, and the average number of eggs laid a day by the 609 hens left after culling was 34.6. The average number of eggs for ten hens a day before culling was 2.6; after culling, 3.5. The average number of eggs laid a day by 363 of the culled hens which were not immediately sold was 14.4.

WASHING WILL INJURE EGGS

Gelatinous Film of Shell That Keeps Out Air and Germs Is Removed—Keep Nests Clean.

Eggs should not be washed as this removes the gelatinous film of the shell that keeps out air and germs. The nests should be kept clean so that the eggs will have no chance to become soiled, as removing dirt by washing will allow molds and germs to enter the egg and hasten its spoiling.—Extension Division, North Dakota Agricultural College.

As grass makes up the bulk of feed for geese, it is doubtful whether it pays to raise them unless good grass range is available during the summer.

The hen that has free range on a farm in summer finds these same things and that is one reason why neglected farm flocks lay well in summer and very poorly at other times.

The results found by experiment seem to prove the contention of some Leghorn breeders that their birds are light eaters in comparison with some other breeds.

If a good lot of well-matured pullets or well-moulted early hens are on hand, and if they are healthy and vigorous, all that is required to obtain a good egg yield is the right kind of care and feed.

There is no one kind of grain that alone will furnish all of the different food elements required to maintain the body of the hen in good condition and also furnish the material of which eggs are made.

LESSON FOR JULY 11

JONATHAN BEFRIENDS DAVID.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 20. GOLDEN TEXT—A friend loveth at all times; and a brother is born for adversity.—Prov. 17:17. ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Sam. 18:1-5, 17-20; 19:1-24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Story of Two Friends. JUNIOR TOPIC—David and His Friend. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Friendships That Are Worth While. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Friendship: What It Is and What It Does.

The friendship between Jonathan and David is peculiar in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interests. Jonathan was the crown prince, the heir to the throne. David was the heir according to divine choice and arrangement. Jonathan knew this and magnanimously waived his natural personal rights to the one whom he knew that God had chosen.

Following the interview of Saul and David after the victory over Goliath, Jonathan's soul was knit with that of David. He loved him as his own soul. While there was mutual love, yet this pleasing trait stands out more in Jonathan than in David, because it meant great loss to him—the loss of the throne, but immense gain to David—the acquisition of the throne to which he had no natural right. The genuine friendship was shown:

I. By Giving to David His Court Robe and Equipment (18:4).

These belonged to Jonathan as the crown prince. Following the love covenant between them (18:3) Jonathan stripped himself of these and gave them to David. This act was virtual abdication in favor of David. "Love seeketh not her own" (I Cor. 13:5).

II. By Defending David Against the Frenzy of Saul (I Sam. 19:1-6).

According to oriental custom, the women met David and his soldiers as they were returning from their victory over the Philistines, and with singing and dancing they ascribed more praise to David than to Saul. This stirred up the murderous envy of Saul and moved him to thrice attempt to kill David. In his third attempt Jonathan defended David before his father and evoked from him the oath that David should not be slain (19:6). Thus he exposed himself to the anger of his infuriated father, for David's sake. When one is willing to lay down his life for another he proves that his friendship is real. "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13).

III. By Revealing to David Saul's Murderous Intent (I Sam. 20:30-40).

The beginning of a new moon was celebrated by sacrifices and feasting, at which all the members of the family were expected to be present (v. 5). David's excuse for absence was to go home to attend the yearly sacrifice of the entire family. This annual feast was more important than the monthly feast.

Matters were now so serious that they renewed the covenant between themselves. In its renewal the terms were projected beyond the life of Jonathan (vv. 14, 15). Saul's anger was now so fierce that for Jonathan to be forced in company with David was a dangerous thing, so he cleverly plans to give David a sign by which he could know Saul's purpose. We prove our friendship by warning those who are exposed to danger. David's heart responded to Jonathan's love by pledging himself to deal faithfully with Jonathan and his seed forever. Later history proves that this was faithfully carried out (II Sam. 9:7, 8).

Some Observations on Friendship:

1. Friendships should be made while the parties are young—while the hearts are capable of being knit together.

2. Real friends are few; therefore be careful in the formation of the ties of friendship. Friends should be selected. We should love everybody, but we can have but few friends.

3. There should be some variations in the temperaments in those who would be friends. Friendships should be formed for the purpose of mutually helping each other. Both parties, however, must possess real merit.

4. Both parties must be God-fearing. David and Jonathan both recognized their obligation to the Lord and that his help was essential to the welfare of both. Without a deep religious life there can be no friendship. There are times when one party must absolutely renounce his interests in behalf of the other. Genuine love is the basis of all friendship.

Good Impulses.

Few good impulses live long unless they are put to work.

The Glory of Life. To do the things that can't be done is the glory of life.

Greatest Losses. The greatest losses are the losses we never observe.

Being Rich or Poor. We are as rich or as poor as our minds make us.

Character. Character is a growth from the soil of purpose.

Try One Brunswick Then Decide

The best way to know for yourself the superiority of the Brunswick Tire is to buy one and compare it.

That is, if the very name of Brunswick isn't sufficient proof to you, as it is to most men, that here is an extraordinary tire. Thousands of men who have known the name of Brunswick for years, realize that a Brunswick Tire has to be the best—for a mediocre product could never bear this historic name.

Long before the Overland Trail became famous, the House of Brunswick was established. It was one of the chief users of rubber for fifty years before automobiles came into use.

No concern with such a history could afford to offer anything but the best. For reputations are built slowly, but can be quickly destroyed.

This is a practical guarantee that Brunswick Tires offer more than the usual, yet at no added cost.

Get your first one now. You'll not be satisfied until you have ALL Brunswicks.

PENNSYLVANIA BRIEFS

Of 15 children of families receiving Mothers' Pension aid in Mt. Pleasant six were found in need of surgical operations.
Found unconscious along the public road below Hollidaysburg, with a fractured skull, C. E. Dangel, 30, laborer of Altoona, is in a critical condition. It is believed he was knocked from his motor cycle by a passing automobile while returning from Williamsburg.

Safe crackers blew open the safe at the mill of Carroll L. Douglass, in Bradford, three distinct explosions being heard. The thieves placed everything in a sack and hurried away. The loot was found near a railway bridge. The thieves were evidently after cash and bonds, and in this were unsuccessful. The safe as well as the interior of the mill office were wrecked.

Edward Rexroth, 34, was killed instantly at Parnob, near Chambersburg, when the brakes on the motor cycle he was riding failed to hold and he crashed head on into a passenger train of the South Penn branch of the Pennsylvania railroad. Rexroth was an employe of the state highway department.

The pollution of the water of Indian creek which supplies the Pennsylvania Railroad company with water for its engines and men and also furnishes a large quantity of water for Greensburg citizens, is causing the people and the railroad company much concern. Already sulphur water is being drained from the mines of the Blair and Melcroft Coal companies, whose holdings are adjacent to the water shed that feeds the big reservoir in Indian creek. A preliminary injunction has been asked for in both Westmoreland and Fayette counties and it is probable that the defendants will have to drain their mines into other channels.

How they fought a duel at about fifteen paces in a box car at Leith near Uniontown, until both fell wounded was told by Arthur Johnson and Marshall Abbott, both ex-service men who had seen action, in their hearing, which was held before Judge E. H. Reppert. The case was compromised by Abbott entering a plea of guilty to aggravated assault and battery. Johnson was hit four times and Abbott once in the duel, in which automatic revolvers were used. The two men quarreled over a woman and Abbott took refuge in a box car when pursued by Johnson.

Mrs. Lulu Fields Speer, 18, of New Brighton, was killed and Sidney Gibson, 22, also of New Brighton, was so badly hurt that he may die in a collision of the motor cycle on which they were riding and an automobile driven by Charles G. Stader, of Cambridge, on the Junction Park road, near Beaver. The impact was so terrific that the motor cycle was wedged in the radiator of the auto and the two persons on it were thrown fifty feet.

That the Boy Scouts of Uniontown are a lousy lot is shown by statistics of medical examinations just completed. The average age is 13 years; average height, 62 1/2 inches; average weight, 99 1/2 pounds; chest contracted, 27 1/2 inches; expanded, 30 1/2 inches; mobility, 3 inches.

Nearly $75,000 worth of merchandise was spilled in a wreck on the Lehigh Valley loop line at Allentown when seven box cars attached to a fast freight train and heavily loaded with molasses, grain and flour were derailed through the breaking of an axle and were thrown down a steep embankment. Most of the cars were demolished and their contents ruined.

When Rev. W. B. Boukner, of Connellsville, did not appear to substantiate alleged charges of bootlegging and protection of gambling, Chief of Police W. B. Bowers was exonerated from the charges. It was intimated, however, that a complete investigation is to be made of the police force.

Lehigh Valley railroad passenger train No. 30, eastbound, jumped the track about two miles south of Allentown, the smoker and three coaches turning over. Four persons were injured and are in St. Luke's hospital, Bethlehem.

There is a merry war on in Lewis town, in regard to enforcing the laws against gambling. Burgess F. W. Sills and Chief of Police H. D. Yeaman charge that Sheriff M. A. Davis and District Attorney L. J. Durbin winked at a carnival exhibiting under the auspices of the Lewis town Junction Fire company, permitting it to operate paddle wheels in violation of the law because they said it was a public charity and now the other four volunteer fire companies located in the borough limits insist they shall be permitted to do likewise.

Lieutenant Colonel Samuel D. Foster, ordinance officer of the new Pennsylvania national guard, said companies accorded federal recognition will begin practice as soon as they receive equipment from the war department.

Official permission has been granted for Hazleton children to attend schools barefooted.

Sleeping sickness has held Miss Charlotte Baker, of Dunbar, unconscious for over a week.

George Davis, a deputy in the office of County Treasurer David John, at Scranton, has resigned to devote all his time to a drug company with which he is connected.

Robert W. McCormick has been designated by the postoffice department as acting postmaster of Connellsville.

Rev. T. W. Tickner resigned as rector of Calvary Episcopal church, Tanawana, to accept a call to North Carolina.

No bidders appeared when the remnants of the army trucks which were turned over to the state highway department by the war department at the close of the war were offered for sale. Several hundred were given to the state by the government for road construction. The trucks were left out all last winter on the Capitol Park extension, Harrisburg, where they rusted under exposure from the elements.

Because of danger from numerous mine cave-ins and fear of more subsidence Lehigh Valley railroad tracks near Centralia are to be moved 200 feet to guarantee safety to traffic. The mountain is now being cut away two miles for the road bed.

Jacob Maue, of Hazleton, shot the largest rattlesnake that has been killed thereabouts in many years. It contained twenty-seven rattles and was six feet, eleven inches long. Three rattlers were together, but two made their escape.

Troop A, of the state constabulary at Greensburg, will soon start a campaign in Westmoreland and surrounding counties to enforce rigidly the automobile laws of Pennsylvania. Particular attention will be given to speeding, the changing of dealers' and drivers' licenses, the overloading of trucks and the observance of signs relative to curves and dangerous places. The police will use motor-cycles.

Two highwaymen staged a hold-up a block away from the police station in Scranton and robbed Parker Wagner, an auto salesman, of more than $1400 in cash. Wagner had just sold an auto and had received $1400 in cash. He started back to the central part of the city when two young men with a revolver attacked him and took the money.

A Clearfield contractor who has been remodeling the County National bank has been unable to get some of the fixtures for the interior shipped on account of a freight embargo. He found it necessary to have the fixtures placed in a refrigerator car, with a lot of ice to make the bluff stronger. The shipment was labeled strawberries and came through in a hurry. A produce firm was notified that a carload of berries had arrived for them and when opened the car was found to contain the bank fixtures.

Accused of a half dozen robberies Roy Messersmith and Walter Groegen were bound over to court by Justice of the Peace Henry G. Thomas, of Sharon. The police have been mystified for several weeks by a series of robberies in the East Hill district. Cellars have been robbed and choice wines and rare liquors stolen. When they made a search of a house which the youthful prisoners were seen to enter the police recovered enough liquors to stock a small saloon. All of the liquor was identified by those whose cellars were robbed.

The state highway department revoked the motor license of Oliver Oberholzer, of Norristown, in the campaign to stop reckless driving. Evidence was submitted to the highway department showing that Oberholzer was a habitual violator of the motor laws in driving in excess of the speed limit.

Arrested after an automobile race up Main street in Uniontown and a display of guns, Charles Cannon, who says his home is in Pittsburgh, entered a plea of guilty to larceny, violation of the auto laws, carrying concealed deadly weapons and other charges. A warrant from Morgantown, W. Va., for his arrest on an automobile theft charge is at the county jail to be served when the Fayette county case against the prisoners are disposed of.

Injuries he suffered due to a kicking mule won an $18,000 verdict for William J. Carroll, of Mount Carmel, in the Northumberland county court at Sunbury. The accident happened at the Alaska colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company in 1915. According to the testimony while the young man was driving a team attached to a trip of eight cars one of the mules kicked and in dodging to get out of the way he fell under the wheels and as a result he lost the use of his right leg.

USEFUL ANIMALS FOR FARMS

Department of Agriculture Assisting in Improvement of Horses in Range Country.

The United States department of agriculture has bred and developed several stallions in its horse-breeding project now located at the U. S. Wyoming Horse Breeding Station, Buffalo, Wyo. The stallions will be leased to private breeders and community breeding clubs for the breeding seasons. In this way it is proposed to assist in the improvement of the light horse stock of the range country where stallions of merit are not available and in those sections where light horses are preferred.

Defender, Ten-Year-Old Bay Stallion—

The number of available stallions is limited to about 10, as only the best of those produced have been retained or will be allowed to go out for public service. These stallions range in height from 15 hands 1 inch to 16 hands 2 inches, weigh from 1,500 to 1,400 pounds, and in nearly all cases are tried sires and known producers.

The object of the work at the station in which these horses are being produced is the preservation and development of a utility horse suitable for range and farm conditions. The points especially emphasized are the development of size, soundness, tractability, action, and stamina, in a useful animal which can be used under the saddle, on the road, or in the field.

Persons interested should address correspondence to the Wyoming Horse Breeding station, Buffalo, Wyo.

EARLY BREEDING ADVOCATED

Lambs Born in Spring Get One or Two Months of Mothers' Milk Before Fighting Worms.

Early breeding, in order that lambs may be old enough to offer strong resistance to worms when they are turned on pasture, is advocated by the Nebraska College of Agriculture. Ewes bred in October and November will lamb in March and April. This will give the lambs from one to two months on their mothers' milk and on grain before they have to combat worms. The principal objection to early lambing is the necessity of having a good barn. However, the expense and trouble from early lambing are more than offset by the ability of the lambs to survive the worm season. Extra feeding of ewes during the breeding season is urged. Well-fed ewes are more likely to produce twins.

TEETH OF CATTLE ARE LOOSE

Nature Intended Them to Be So to Prevent Injury to Jawbone in Cutting Off Grass.

The incisor teeth of cattle project forward and their upper surfaces come into contact with the "dental pad" of the upper jaw. Grass is cut off by the cow grasping it and jerking the head upward, thereby cutting it with the sharp edges of the incisors. If the incisors were firmly fixed in the jawbone injury to the dental pad would frequently occur. Don't worry when you discover that the cow's front teeth are loose. Nature intended them to be so.

A Prominent Nurse Testifies

Lewistown, Pa.—"I was all broken down in health, suffered from a displacement. One of my friends came to see me and advised me to commence taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I began and also used the Goddard Medical Discovery and the Pleasant Pellets with very beneficial results. I have been a midwife for several years and always recommended the Favorite Prescription to every woman to take during expectancy and afterward, and they all get along so nicely. It surely is a God-send to suffering women. It also carried me through the critical time of life and I had no trouble or distress whatever. I keep it constantly in the house and will not be without it."

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, when a woman passes through the changes of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe organic disturbances.

At these critical times women are best fortified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, an old remedy of proved worth. All druggists. Liquid or tablets, or send Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford Sedan, with electric self-starting and lighting system and demountable rims with 3 1/2 tires front and rear, for every day in the year has no equal as a family car. Just as popular on the farm as it is in the city. In fact, it fits the family demands, every vocation of life. Large roomy seats, finely upholstered, plate glass windows make it an open car in pleasant weather, while in rainy and inclement weather it becomes a closed car, dust-proof and rain-proof. It is not only comfortable, but really cozy, and above all economical in operation and maintenance, and has all the Ford merits of strength and durability.

ROOSEVELT FOR VICE PRESIDENT

Navy Official Named As Gov.
Cox's Running Mate on Democratic Ticket

San Francisco.—Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and a relative of the President who bore that name, was chosen by the Democratic National Convention as its candidate for Vice President and running mate for Governor Cox.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

The bandwagon movement for Mr. Roosevelt got under way very quickly after the convention assembled, although other candidates, among them Governor Stewart of Montana and Major General L. D. Tyson of Tennessee, were presented.

Mr. Roosevelt was placed in nomination by Timothy L. Ansberry, former Representative in Congress from Ohio, who sat as a District of Columbia delegate.

Mr. Roosevelt's nomination from the District instead of New York State was accounted a bit of political strategy, which would meet the demands of the Western delegates for a candidate not accounted a member of the Tammany machine in New York. Mr. Roosevelt has had his political difficulties with Tammany for several years.

Governor Smith of New York, finally took the platform and told the convention he had been instructed by his delegation to second Mr. Roosevelt's nomination.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Christian of the Washington delegation seconded Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. Mrs. Bessie Richards of Linton, Ore., made a nominating speech for W. T. Vaughan of that state.

Texas seconded the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt also.

Vermont did likewise when the state was called.

Richard Seeley Jones of Seattle, Wash., seconded the nomination of General Tyson.

Jones, a private in the army during the World War, declared it an evidence of democracy that "a common soldier should be heard to second the nomination of a general officer."

Former Governor Dunne withdrew James Hamilton Lewis. Then the name of Edward L. Doherty of California was withdrawn. Major-General L. D. Tyson of Tennessee, personally took the platform and withdrew, and then Senator Nugent withdrew the name of former Governor Hawley of Idaho. Joseph E. Davies of Wisconsin, in withdrawing his own name by inference, pledged Wisconsin to support Mr. Roosevelt. W. T. Vaughn of Oregon, also withdrew and his sponsor seconded Mr. Roosevelt's nomination.

David R. Francis of St. Louis, former Governor of Missouri and American Ambassador to Russia, who also had been placed in nomination, took the platform and moved the nomination of Roosevelt by acclamation. It was exactly 3:15 o'clock when the convention, with loud cheers, nominated Mr. Roosevelt with a loud shout and the first party cry, "Cox and Roosevelt," rang out. Mr. Roosevelt left the convention hall just before he was nominated, but after his nomination was a certainty. To a number of friends he recalled that he had prophesied that the convention would be "unbossed," and declared that his prophecy had come true.

FIRST WOMAN VOTE

Kentucky Has Distinction of Having Woman Voter for President.

San Francisco.—The first vote to be cast for a woman for the Democratic Presidential nomination came from the Kentucky delegation. Chairman Stanley cast it for Miss Laura Clay, one of the women of the delegation. So far as convention observers could remember it was the first vote cast for a woman in the convention of either of the two great parties.

CHAPTER I.

The "Troops"

"It was hard luck," said Searles, "that I should spend a year writing a play for a woman only to find that she had vanished—jumped off the earth into nowhere. This was my highest flight, Singleton, the best writing I ever did, and after the vast pains I took with the thing, the only woman I ever saw who could possibly act it is unavailable; worse than that, absolutely undiscoverable! Nobody knows I have this script; I've kept quiet about it simply because I'm not going to be forced into accepting a star I don't want. I have a feeling about this play that I never had about my other things. The public has been so kind to my small offerings that I'm trying to lead 'em on to the best I can do; something a little finer and more imaginative, with a touch of poetry, if you please. And now—"

He glared at me as though I were responsible for his troubles. As he knew I had been flying in the French aviation corps for two years and had just been invalided home, I didn't think it necessary to establish an alibi. Fate had been kind to Dick Searles. In college he had written a play or two that demonstrated his talent, and after a rigid apprenticeship as scene-shifter and assistant producer he had made a killing with "Let George Do It," a farce that earned enough to put him at ease and make possible an upward step into straight comedy. Even as we talked a capacity house was laughing at his skit, "Who Killed Cock Robin?" just around the corner from his lodgings. So his story was not the invention of a rejected playwright to cover the non-appearance of a play which nobody would produce.

"Isn't it always a mistake to write a play for a particular star?" I suggested. "Seems to me I've read somewhere that that is among the besetting sins of you playwrights."

"Old stuff, my boy; but this isn't one of those cases. The person I had in mind for this play wasn't a star, but a beginner, quite unknown. It was when I was in London putting on 'Fairy Gold' that I saw her; she had a small part in a pantomime, and pantomime is the severest test of an actor's powers, you know. A little later she appeared in 'Honorable Women,' a capital play that died early, but there again I felt her peculiar charm—it was just that. She was exquisite! No one ever captured my imagination as she did. I watched her night after night. I was afraid that when I heard her voice it would break the spell, and I actually shook like a man with an ague when she trotted out on the stage as the ingenue in 'Honorable Women.' And her laughter! You know how hollow the usual stage mirth is, but that girl's laugh had the joy of the lark ascending."

"By Jove!" I ejaculated, "there's more here than appears. You're in love with the girl!"

"Rubbish," he cried impatiently. "You'll think I'm talking rot, but this girl was the visualization of a character I had dreamed of and groped after for years. That's all; but it's a whole lot I can tell you!"

"Let us be practical for a moment, Searles," I urged. "Emperors, presidents, and popular murderers are not more conspicuous than the people of the stage. No girl talented enough to get two engagements, even for small parts, in a first class London theater could vanish. With your acquaintance in the profession you'd be able to trace her anywhere on earth. By the way, what did the paragon call herself?"

"Violet Dewing was her stage name and the only name the managers knew her by. I assumed that, of course, all I had to do was to finish my play and then have Dalton, who represents me over there, make an appointment to read it to her; but Dalton worked for three months trying to find her, without success. I wasn't the only person who was interested in her. Dalton said that half a dozen managers had their eye on her, but after 'Honorable Women' closed she stepped into the void. I knew what you're thinking—that the other members of the two companies she appeared with must have had some inkling of her identity, but I tell you Dalton and I exhausted the possibilities. It was by accident that she got her chance in the pantomime—some one wouldn't do at the last minute, and they gave Miss Dewing a trial. She was well liked by her associates in spite of the fact that she was a bit offish and vanished from their world the minute the curtain fell."

"A clever governess out of a job, satisfying a craving for excitement and playing the mysterious role as a part of the adventure. Am I to assume that you've burned your play and that the incident is closed?"

"Oh, I didn't burn it; I have a copy locked in a safety vault, and Dalton left one heavily sealed at a small exclusive London hotel where, he found after much difficulty, the girl had lodged during her two engagements."

"You're morbid," I said. "Show me her photograph."

He laughed ironically. "Never a chance, Singleton! You haven't yet got the idea that this young woman is out of the ordinary. She refused to be photographed—wrote it into her two contracts that this was not to be asked. I never saw her off the stage, and I can't give you a description of her that would be of the slightest assistance to the keenest detective alive. In that pantomime she was a frolic, the clown's daughter, and, although nobody saw it, she was the whole piece, the elusive sprite that could evoke laughter and tears by a gesture, a lifting of the brows, a grimace. By utterly different methods in 'Honorable Women' she proved her wide range of appeal. Hers was the one true characterization in the piece. When Terry was in her prime you remember how we used to say that only one bird sang like that, and from paradise it flew? Well, this bird sings on the same branch! Her voice was her charm made audible!"

"Rave some more!" I pleaded. "You never talked better in your life."

"Don't be an ass," he said sourly. "Let's forget her and take a squint at your affairs. Just what do you mean to do with yourself?"

"My shoulder still creaks a little, and the doctors advise me to sit around for a while. They offered me some jobs in Washington, but desk work and inspection duty are too tame after a couple of years spent in star climbing. I'm going up to Barton-on-the-Sound and I'll camp in the garage on my uncle's place."

"Your uncle played you a nasty trick," interrupted Searles; "getting married and then adding to the crime by dying. You couldn't beat that for general spitefulness."

"Do you remember the immortal lines:

"Oh, skip your dear uncle!"
The Bellman exclaimed
As he angrily tinkled his bell?"

"Oh, I'm not knocking the dead!" he protested. "Mr. Bashford always struck me as a pretty decent, square sort of chap, and not at all the familiar ghouly uncle of fiction and the drama. I made notes on him from time to time with a view to building a play around him—the perfect uncle, unobtrusive, never blustering at his nephew; translating the avuncular relationship into something remote and chaste like a distant view of Mount Washington in winter. It was just like him to retire from business on his sixtieth birthday and depart for the Orient, there to commit the shameless indiscretion of matrimony."

"Oh, I'm Not Knocking the Dead!"

"Like him! It was the greatest shock of my life. To the best of my knowledge he never knew any women except the widow of his partner in the importing house. She was about eighty and perfectly safe. He spent twenty years in the Tynningham, the dullest and most respectable hotel in the world, and his chief recreation was a leisurely walk in the park before going to bed. You could set your clock by him. Pretty thin picking for a dramatist, I should think. He used to take me to the theater regularly every other Thursday—it was a date—and his favorite entertainment was vaudeville with black-face embellishment preferred. But in his shy fashion he was kind and generous and mighty good to me."

"If you hadn't gone to war, but had kept right at his elbow, the marriage might have been averted," suggested Searles. "He did leave you something, didn't he?"

"Fifty thousand cash and the right to use the garage at the Barton farm. Calling it a farm is a joke; it's rocks mostly. He bought the house to have a place to store his prints and Jap ceramics. He hated motoring except in taxis up and down town, and when I urged him to set up a machine, he told me to go ahead and buy one and build the garage. Told me I'd better fix up the studio in the garage and have it as a place to work in. His will provides that I may lodge in the garage for life."

"The estate footed a million, as I remember, so I can't praise his generosity. But the widow, your unknown auntie, the Lady-snatcher who annexed the old boy—what of her?"

"I've asked the trust company people whether she's in sight anywhere, and they assure me that she is not on these shores. Torrence, the third vice president—you know Torry; he was in the class ahead of us at college, the man who never smiles—Torry said she acknowledged the last remittance three months ago from Bangkok—wherever that is. I suppose the old girl's resumed her tour of the world looking for another retired merchant to add to her list."

"Very likely. To what nation, tribe, or human group does this predatory person belong?"

"I'll tell you all I know. Just as I was sailing from France I got a letter from Uncle Bash stating in a most businesslike fashion that he was about to be married to a lady he had met on the trip out to Japan. The dire event was to occur at the American embassy the following day. From which I judged that my presence at the ceremony was neither expected nor desired. Oddly enough, months afterward, I picked up an English paper in a French inn that contained an announcement of the marriage in the usual advertisement form. The lady was succinctly described as Mrs. Alice Wellington Cornford, widow of the late Archibald Reynolds Cornford, Pepperharrow road, Hants. All Torrence knows of the subsequent proceedings is what he got in official reports of Uncle Bash's death from the consul-general at Tokyo. Whether the widow expects to come to America ultimately or will keep moving through the Orient marrying husbands and burying them is a dark mystery. If she should turn up, the house at Barton is hers, of course, but with her roving disposition I fancy my aunt Alice wouldn't like the place. The Jap stuff is worth a bit of money, and if the lady is keen for such things and not a mere adventuress she may take it into her head one of these days to come over and inspect the loot."

"I can see the vampire," said Searles musingly, "landing at the Grand Central with enough hand-luggage to fill a freight-car; a big, raw-boned creature, with a horse face and a horrible mess as to clothes. You will be there to meet her, deferential, anxious to please. You will pilot her up to the coast of Barton, tip the servants heavily to keep them from murdering her, and twiddle your thumbs in your garage as you await her further pleasure. By the way, are those ancient freaks still on the place—those broken-down hotel employees who were your uncle's sole experiment in philanthropy?"

"Torrence assures me they are all very much there."

Searles yielded himself to laughter. "An Englishwoman with lofty ideas of domestic service would certainly enjoy a romp with that crew."

"Oh, they are in the same class with me," I explained. "The place can't be sold till I die, and while I live there'll be harbored—about thirty of them—clothed and victualled."

"I think there's a farce in the idea, and I may try it one of these days," he said, scribbling in his note-book. "A refuge for broken-down chambermaids, venerable bell-hops grown gray in the service, and the head waiter who amassed a fortune in tips and then toyed with the market once too often and lost his ill-gotten gains. What was the head waiter's name who presided with such stateliness in the dining-room of the Tynningham?"

"That's Antoine, who married the assistant housekeeper at the Tynningham. He's the butler and has charge of the place. When I get settled I'll ask you up and you can study the bunch at leisure."

"Splendid! I'll be up in a couple of weeks. I'm going to Ohio tomorrow for a family reunion and a look at the loved spots my infancy knew."

"You're lucky to have home-folks even in Ohio," I remarked enviously.

"Well, there's always your distant auntie cruising the seven seas in pursuit of husbands. Nobody with an aunt to his credit can pretend to be alone in the world. Aunts must rank just a little below mothers in the heavenly kingdom. When I was a boy out in Ohio there were two great occasions every year in my life—one when I went to visit a grand old aunt I had in the country, the other when she visited us, arriving with a wagonload of jam, jelly, salt-rising bread, pound-cake, and other unpurchasable manna."

"Stop! or I'll call the food censor," I pleaded, picking up my hat. "Send me your copy of 'Lady Geranium'."

and I'll tell you whether it's a classic or not."

"Lady Larkspur," he corrected with a shudder. "You shall have it by trusted messenger tomorrow."

I wired Antoine that I would reach Barton-on-the-Sound the following day. This was September, 1917.

As the train rolled along the familiar shore toward Barton I shook off the depression occasioned by my enforced retirement from the great struggle overseas. I had done under the French flag all that it was possible for me to do; and there was some consolation in the fact that by reason of my two years on the battle-line I was just so much ahead of the friends I met in New York who were answering the call to the colors and had their experience of war before them. The tranquil life that had been recommended by the doctor was not only possible at Barton, but it was the only life that could be lived there. My leisure I meant to employ in beginning a novel that had been teasing me ever since I sailed for home.

Of my uncle Bash I had only the happiest and most intimate memories. Quite naturally it had occurred to me at times, and my friends had encouraged the idea, that my uncle would die some day and leave me his money. There was no particular reason why he should do so, as he had never manifested any unusual affection for me and I had certainly never done anything for him.

Antoine was at the Barton station with the touring-car Uncle Bash had bought to establish communication with the village. Flynn, the big Irishman who had been the doorman at the Tynningham for years and retired because of rheumatism acquired from long exposure to the elements at the hostelry's portals, was at the wheel.

Antoine greeted me with that air of lofty condescension tempered with a sincere kindness that had made him a prince among head-waiters. As I shook hands with him his lips quivered and tears came to his eyes.

I bade Antoine join me in the back seat that he might the more easily bring me up to date as to affairs on the estate.

"It must be a little slow up here after the years you lived in town," I suggested, "but of course you're all old friends."

"Well, yes; all friends," he acquiesced, but with so little enthusiasm that I looked at him quickly. He pretended to be absorbed in the flying landscape at the moment. Flynn, I noticed, was giving ear to our conversation from the wheel.

"It was sad, very sad, Mr. Bashford passing away so far from home, sir. It was a great shock. And he had looked forward for years to a quiet life abroad."

Antoine's speech was that of a well-trained English upper servant, and I imagined that in his youth he had taken some English butler as his model. He used to pretend that he knew French very imperfectly, and I was surprised when he now addressed me quite fluently in that language.

"You have been with the armies of dear France," he remarked. "The war is very dreadful. My parents were of Verdun; it grieves me to know of the suffering in the land of my people."

As I replied sympathetically in French I saw Flynn straighten himself at the wheel with an impatient fling of his head. Antoine indicated him with a contemptuous nod: "Married Elsie, the German woman who worked in the linen-room at the Tynningham! This had caused some trouble, and there is a pantry girl, Gretchen, who was ill for a long time before the master left, and he sent her here for the country air. She is a little devil with her dear Fatherland."

I laughed at the old fellow's grave and earnestness. That the war was making itself felt on the quiet acres at Barton-on-the-Sound was absurd.

I was pondering the recrudescence of race hatreds due to the upheaval in Europe when he startled me by a statement uttered close to my ear: "There have been inquiries for the widow; these have caused me much anxiety. It seems that there are persons anxious to see her. There have been inquiries, one—two—three times."

"Probably some of her American friends anxious to pay their respects, or some of the neighbors making calls of courtesy," I suggested.

"A foreign gentleman who acts very queerly," Antoine persisted.

My uncle's widow was a vague, unknown being whom I had never expected to cross my horizons. If she meditated a descent upon Barton-on-the-Sound, the trust company would certainly have had some hint of her approach, but Torrence clearly had had no tidings of her beyond her last communication from Bangkok. Still, it was wholly possible that a globe-trotting widow would have friends in many parts of the world, and I could see nothing disturbing in the fact that inquiries had been made for her. I said as much. Antoine's answer was another shrug and a jerk of his head toward Flynn, as though even the employment of an alien tongue might not conceal our conversation from the big Irishman. When we had reached the farm and were running through the grounds Antoine spoke again.

"We thought we would put you up at the house, Mr. Singleton, and not in the garage," he said inquiringly.

"Not at all, Antoine," I answered quickly. "We must stick close to the law in such matters."

How I Found the Tractor With the Simplicity and Dependability You Want

I investigated for months, and let nothing but the facts in a tractor influence me. I had many different tractor salesmen call here--I read dozens of manufacturers' booklets--and I personally inspected a good many tractors.

None satisfied me completely till I saw the G-O.

Its simplicity was proved when I got in the seat, and with a five-minute explanation, took full control of its six speeds, forward and reverse. I saw you couldn't strip gears because in the G-O transmission gears and clutch are eliminated.

Then they showed me how trouble is prevented, how the G-O gets such a long life--every single gear and bearing, from front wheels to drawbar, enclosed in dust-tight casing and running in oil. And there are no gears or chains on the rear wheels to wear out and cause delay.

While pulling three 14-in. plows on kerosene at a speed that showed ten acres a day was easy, they stopped the tractor and proved accessibility by letting me get at any part I wanted to right in the field.

Protection for the farmer is made complete by the G-O guarantee. It covers every single part of his tractor, guarantees dependability throughout.

Drop in and see the G-O, or write me for a catalog.

Questions.

1. Name three milk products.
2. What is Pasteurization?
3. Name two diseases which may be carried by milk.

MILK

Old Eph Brown, long haired, lean and given to argument was holding forth to an open-mouthed group of loungers. "Ye may talk as ye please about pasteurized milk, ye can't have it in winter time for there's no pasture for the cows to eat. An' I leave it to Doc, George over there if it ain't so."

"I am afraid Mr. Brown has misunderstood," smiled the Doctor. "The word 'Pasteurize' has no relation to grass or meadows, but has reference to a certain treatment of milk that was advised by a celebrated scientist, named Pasteur, who discovered that if milk were heated to 145 degrees and kept at that temperature for a half hour, disease germs of high count would be rendered harmless, while the food value of the milk would not be lessened."

"Well I'll swan," said Eph. The doctor added, "To be of value, pasteurization should be done soon after milking. Germs multiply rapidly and throw off poisons called toxins. Late pasteurization, while it destroys the germs, does not destroy the toxins. Such milk is not good for any person and is particularly unsafe for babies."

Eph interrupted, "Say, Doc, I've raised children and grandchildren, and none of 'em ever had pasteurized milk, as you call it."

"That shows what strong children can stand, but it is no argument against making milk safe."

"Over in Blain township there was a farmer who kept a few cows and peddled milk in Average on four miles away. He didn't groom his cows, he didn't wipe their udders with a disinfectant before milking and he didn't pasteurize his milk. He regarded such practices as 'new fangled fooleries'."

"One hot summer day his grandchild took suddenly sick. When the doctor came, he said, 'Feed milk.' As he picked up a milk bottle and gave it a sudden swirl, numerous specks were seen moving about the bottom."

"The grandfather was hard to convince, but when the laboratory report showed an extraordinary high number of germs present and when a dozen other babies along his route sickened, he believed. He told me the other day that it almost cost the life of his grandchild to convince him, but you should see his place now. Clean cows, which have been tested for tuberculosis; clean stable; clean hands for milkers; clean buckets and pans, always cleansed in boiling water or by steam; a small pasteurization plant, clean milk bottles and clean caps. After the milk has been pasteurized it is kept in a low temperature."

In George went on his way but he had saved a seed in the ground. The Brown saved immediately on a campaign of education. His no body could either ignore or deny, but he kept at it. It wasn't long until the whole community was talking milk. The Woman's Club, composed largely of young mothers, called a meeting and invited an expert to speak to them.

He told them the food value of milk was greater in proportion to its cost than anything they could buy. That housewives usually measure the food value by the depth of the cream line on the bottle. This, he said, was unreliable in milk that has been pasteurized, but is of some value in raw or unpasteurized milk.

State laws regulate the amount of cream or fat in milk and prohibit the use of adulterants.

"Every town," he said, "has the power to pass ordinances requiring milk men, not only to have a license to sell their product, but to conform to the sanitary regulations concerning the handling of milk, which have been laid down by the State Department of Health."

"Typhoid fever, diphtheria, scarlet fever, and other diseases may be transmitted through milk, which has been infected either from the hands of the milkers, from flies, from the water used in cleansing utensils and in numerous other ways. The remedy is intelligent supervision, the enforcement of the milk ordinances, which includes, of course, pasteurization to destroy the germs."

He advised the appointment of a five committee to supervise the milk situation of the community and to make sure of the enforcement of the laws which were made for the protection of the people.

He spoke of the nutritional value of milk products such as butter, cheese, and ice cream, and advised a pint, or more, of clean, wholesome milk daily, for each growing child.

Public interest did not cease with the close of the meeting. The committee appointed were active and on the job. The babies of Greensward are going to have a chance, and it all came about because old Eph Brown thought cows on pasture gave pasteurized milk.

Not Easy to Practice Thrift.

Thrift begins with trifles and leads toward contentment. The difficulty is to begin saving just a little when you have plenty. It is so much easier to spend the whole surplus from week to week and from month to month while things are coming easy.
